

© Simon Gruber

Migration, Time, and Temporality

International Conference

4-5 May 2023

FH St. Pölten, Campus-Platz 1, 3100 St. Pölten

FutureLab (Haus B, Raum B.0.12)

THU 4 May

13:00 Open Doors

13:40–14:00 Welcome

14:00–15:45 Working time

Chair: Anne Unterwurzacher

Maria Adamopoulou: Fast forward: the Greek Gastarbeiter's perceptions of time in their migration journeys 1960–1989

Verena Lorber: "I didn't think I would stay here this long". State and individual perspectives on the temporality of labor migration to Austria in the 1960s and 1970s

Natasha Ružić/Katica Jurčević/Marina Perić Kaselj: The influence of temporal aspects of return migration and decision-making processes for Croatians living abroad on their potential for return

15:45–16:15 Coffee break

16:15–17:25 Epistolary time and the experience of migration

Chair: Mirjam Milharčič Hladnik

Margarita Dounia: The multiple temporalities of migrant family letters: a case study from post-WWII Greece

Miha Zobec: The family Guštin and its experience of temporalities between Argentina and the Italo-Yugoslav border

17:25–17:45 Coffee break

17:45–18:45 Keynote

Linn Axelsson: Borders as time-spaces of authority: The regulation of cross-border movements and rights

19:30 Conference Dinner

FRI 5 May

09:30–10:40 Temporalities of opportunity

Chair: Annemarie Steidl

Hans Peter Hahn: The freedom of the migrant. Temporalities of mobile biographies

Mirjam Milharčič Hladnik: The contested future: the subjective perception of time and temporality among young migrants along the western Slovenian border 1947–1962

10:40–11:00 Coffee Break

11:00–12:45 Temporalities of exclusion: time as a foreign country

Chair: Oliver Kühschelm

Marlene Müller-Brandeck: The temporal inclusion of refugees in societal docking sites: insights from a sociotheoretical research project

Anna Prashizky: “A desert city surrounded by mountains, where everything closes on Shabbat”: second-generation Russian-speaking migrants narrating the Israeli periphery

Sebastien Tremblay: Erasing queerness through European time: coming to terms with the National Socialist past and the exclusion of queer migrants in 21st century Germany

12:45–14:00 Lunch

14:00–15:10 Heteronomous time – when time is not on your side

Chair: Aleksej Kalc

Benedetta Fabrucci: A time of waiting: foreign refugees in Trieste’s transit camps in the 1950s

Zoé Crine/Francesca Raimondo: “To me it’s just a stamp”: times, temporalities and shape of vulnerabilities in the Belgian asylum system

15:10–15:30 Round-up Discussion

Chair: Annemarie Steidl

In the early 2000s migration research expanded to embrace a broad conception of mobility that included short distances, circular movements, and no movement at all. This paradigmatic shift sparked interest in the myriad ways that time and temporality intersect with the experience and regulation of migration. The conference will pursue this line of inquiry and stimulate discussions between a diverse range of scholars active in the historical and social sciences.

The conference is the second of the series (Researching) Migration: On New Paths, in Each Direction? The first conference has taken place last year at the University of Vienna and centred on Spaces and Locations of Migration.

The conference series is organized by:

- Research Network for Interdisciplinary Regional Studies first:
Oliver Kühschelm (Centre for Historical Migration Research/IGLR), Anne Unterwurzacher (Ilse Arlt Institute for Social Inclusion Research/UAS St. Pölten)
- University of Vienna: Annemarie Steidl (Department of Economic and Social History)
- Slovenian Migration Institute ZRC SAZU (Scientific Research Centre at the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts):
Mirjam Milharčič Hladnik, Aleksej Kalc, Miha Zobec